Critical Call for Support

Noncommunicable diseases (NCDs) stand as the primary reason for illness and death in Iraq. Paired with gender disparities, women and children encounter the most challenges in obtaining quality healthcare. To enhance healthcare access, Al-Ayn aims to provide patients with continuous care and clinics with necessary equipment. While our experts have envisioned the path, we require financial support to collectively achieve our goal.

The Healing Impact of Medical Care and Clinics

One fully equipped clinic can provide thousands of patients a year a vital lifeline. Beyond merely administering medical procedures or prescriptions, it includes devising a comprehensive treatment strategy for each child. This project looks to tackle the root causes of access to quality health care for the marginalized to enable a healthier future for all.

Building Homes Not Houses

Orphaned children require secure and nurturing homes that offer warmth, safety, and stability, fostering their ability to experience a fulfilling childhood. Many of the orphaned families that come to Al-Ayn are living in houses with no adequate space and no protection from harsh weather. Some houses have broken windows or doors, or are damaged in ways that make it dangerous for children to play in.

Al-Ayn has established multifaceted housing complexes in Iraq to ensure orphaned children and their families receive new homes. Every home provided is fully equipped. Additionally, our housing project also focuses on renovating existing homes, ensuring they are suitable and safe for orphaned children to reside in.

Saif

We used to live in a really old house. Whenever it rained, our house would get flooded with rainwater and creepy insects. But this new house has good and clean walls. I even have my own room now and can read my books in peace!

For eleven-year-old Saif, gaining a new home is likely a very defining moment in his childhood. He no longer needs to worry about the weather having such a destructive impact on his day. He may even start enjoying the sound of the raindrops on his window from the comfort of his new room.

Many other orphaned children like Saif are still in houses that are not fit for living. We need your support to give as many children we can a new home that makes them feel safe.

Pressing Need for Homes

Currently Al-Ayn has hundreds of applications for houses to be built and repairs to be completed on existing homes of orphaned children. Time is critical as a secure and stable environment is the primary factor on the child's well-being and development.

Making a Difference Through a Donation

Ownership of a home serves as the fundamental means to elevate a family from poverty and break the cycle, providing them with the chance to secure a sustainable future free from handouts. Your donation of a single home can drive a full family into security and comfort for generations to come.

Donate to provide a home, protection and ease to orphaned children and their families.
